

ITALIAN SOLDIERS HAULING A HEAVY GUN UP A MOUNTAINSIDE

Four long streams of Italian soldiers hauling a heavy Italian mortar to its position above the mountain slopes over a specially-constructed track. One of the difficulties with which artillerymen have to contend in the high Alps is, of course, the absence of good roads to certain strategic points and the enormous gradients. The above picture shows how these difficulties are in a measure overcome.
—Drawn by F. Metaxas for The Sunday World and The Sphere.

Lt. Doyley Hughes winning his D.S.O. by swimming from a submarine to a Turk railway in the Sea of Marmora, pushing a raft loaded with explosive to blow up a viaduct. Stripped to the skin, he swam ashore at night, exploded his charge, and then fired at, returned safely.

A picture of British submarine activity in the Sea of Marmora. — Prisoners and captives were captured from an armed ship and after making the ship discharge her cargo of melons, the submarine's crew sent the prisoners away in a small sailing vessel conveniently near.

A domestic scene behind the lines in Serbia—French soldiers performing homely duties in a regiment's field kitchen.

Some French soldiers are discarding bayonets in their assaults on German trenches and go into the fray armed with a butcher knife and revolver and well muffled up.

Loading a French trench cannon for firing bombs from trenches.

We've heard of wives shaving their husbands, so why not the woman barber. London has 'em.

A French soldier wearing his full anti-gas outfit.

A woman omnibus conductor in London meeting her male comrades at a terminus.

Mrs. Lister, a champion recruiter of England, on the Nelson Column, Trafalgar Square.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Lauder, arriving for his American tour. To reporters he expressed himself as not opposed to England's no-treating order.

General Ballioud, a keen and resourceful leader of French troops in Serbia.

A recruiting procession in London, organized by the Church Nursing Brigade, in memory of Edith Cavell, and headed by a band of girls.

Austrian being hauled up an Alp cliffside.

London paying homage to the memory of Edith Cavell, the brave war-nurse whose murder shocked the whole world. The crowd about St. Paul's Cathedral during the impressive memorial services.

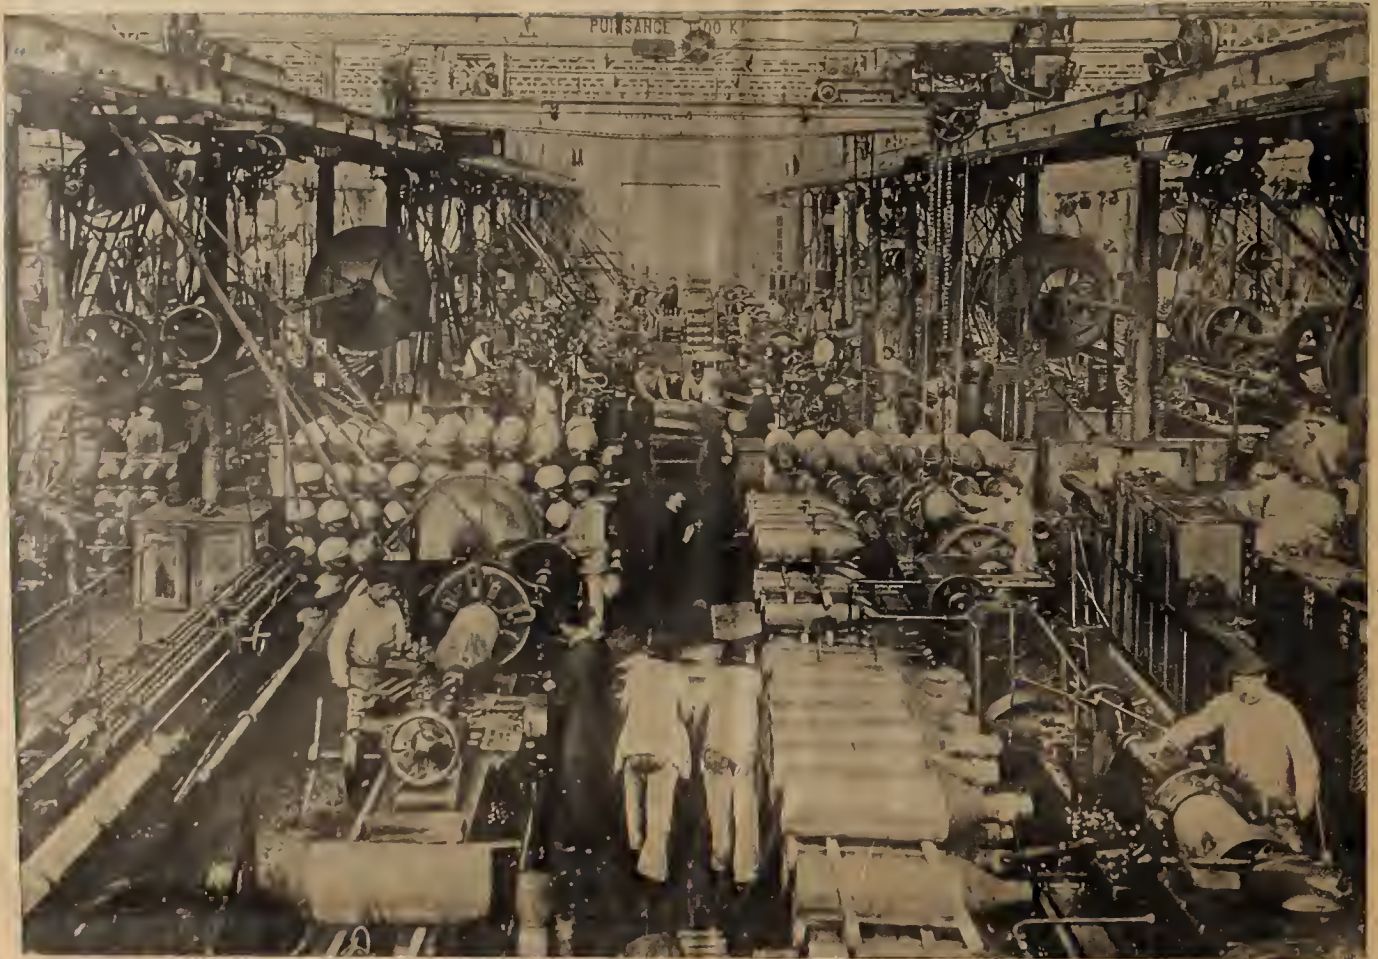

Lieut. Hugo Throssell, V.C., whose gallantry and devotion to duty at Gallipoli made him a great national hero to Australia.

King George, accompanied by Lord Kitchener, reviewing the Royal Ulster Volunteers and other Irish regiments near Aldershot before the departure of the soldiers for the battle line.

The interior of one of the Schneider workshops at Creusot, where large calibre French shells are manufactured. Albert Thomas, France's Minister of Munitions, said recently that the Central Powers' output was 250,000 shells a day and that England and France alone were now exceeding this. From forty to fifty thousand women are working in French shell factories.

Large naval guns being bored and rifled in the Schneider workshops at Creusot, France, second in size to the Krupp shops at Essen. The two pictures were officially taken and sent to The Sunday World. They assist the statement that all France is working at one common task, the prosecution of the war.

Children of Alsace and Lorraine leaving their homes to go to France to learn their mother tongue. These children were under German rule, but were released by the gain of this former French territory.

"After a bit my turn came at the dressing station. It was quite cool and breezy there compared with the trenches. They took my boots off and laid me out on a nice little table, with everything round me fixed up as neat as you could think. Instruments all shining bright in the sun. Doctor with rubber gloves; assistant fixed up just the same. They lied me up all right, but how long they took over it I really couldn't tell you."—An incident at the Dardanelles.

General Joffre and Lord Kitchener at close range. The incident was the French commander-in-chief's first war visit to London.

Will accept part cash and balance in good residential Toronto property, but mostly cash preferred. No second mortgage considered.

MUST BE CLEAR-CUT PROPOSITIONS

This valuable property is in Oshawa, on Park Road, Westmount; every foot inside of the town limits; consists of six acres, with about three acres of beautiful fruit, such as winter and fall apples, mostly winter; cherries, plums, pears, etc., and about one acre of Culhbert raspberries; are nearly half-acre of strawberry rhubarb—all well cultivated. There will also be included with this property nearly two hundred utility bred-to-lay barred rock pullets, now laying, and several latest model hot-water incubators, together with a large number of Colony coops and brooders for rearing young chicks. Implements for working garden, horse and wagon; also a large number of new 1½ x 36-foot hot bed or cold frame sash, which will cover over thirteen hundred square feet. The land contains the very best of clay loam. It has been worked this year as a market garden. Hundreds of dollars' worth of produce have been sold, most of it having been shipped to Toronto. Vouchers can be produced confirming this statement. It would make an ideal place for a florist with extensive greenhouses, or a practical gardener. This property is rapidly increasing in value and could be sold off in building lots at any time or built up with houses, as there will be in Oshawa next spring an immediate demand for houses, owing to the new industries which are locating here. These are described in an article referring to Oshawa on Page Two of the News Section of this paper. There is a large frontage facing on Park Road, in fact the property is almost square. Park Road is the first main thoroughfare west of Simcoe Street. Simcoe Street is Oshawa's business centre joining King Street. Park Road is exactly one-half mile from Simcoe Street; the property is situated about one-quarter of a mile north from King Street, or nearly three hundred yards from the Toronto Eastern Electric Railway.

This property can be leased for a term of years.

The above photograph shows just a corner of the six acres which you will notice is cultivated; it also shows a few of the young trees and raspberry bushes. This photograph illustrates the relative value of the property to the town. In the distance will be seen the Onkawa Fair Grounds and Park, Golf Grounds, General Hospital and also Prospect Park, which was recently owned by Ex-Mayor Edmondson and sold this summer to Mr. S. McLaughlin for the sum, it is rumored, of forty thousand dollars.

The above photograph shows a partial view of the six acres, showing young and older orchards. There are about fifty Montmorency cherry trees, five-year-old, just newly coming into bearing; a honyey sixty feet long; also a solid brick garage with stone foundation, 15 x 20 houses; barn 16 x 30 feet, and a six-acre house, brick and roughcast. At the right, adjoining this property, can be seen two new brick barns per lot. Facing these lots running east from Park Road is a solid four years ago lot for two hundred to three hundred and fifty dollars and immediately joins it. This will be of considerable value if subdivided.

This photograph shows a portion of the six acres from another angle and in the distance will be seen a part of the business section of the town. It is only fifteen minutes' walk from the property to the corner of King and Simpson Streets.
